Hook, Line and Sinker – A Detective Al Harris Cold Case How long would you wait to prove your son's death was no accident? Dozens of family members and loved ones who never got any closure call Detective Al Harris to look into their cold cases. He ignores most of them, trying to get back to focusing on not doing any real work. Then a particularly persistent woman piques his interest. Her son died on a fishing trip with his friends almost a decade ago—seemingly just a tragic accident. But his mother is certain that it was no accident. When enough details don't line up, the detective agrees to take on the case, even if it means the end of his career.
