Warning: This full length novel contains serious subject matter and should not be read by anyone looking for fairytale romance. This BDSM story explores the world of bondage and sadism in realistic terms and is not purely about erotic fantasy, even though there are romantic elements present within the story. Please read with caution. The lighthearted should stay far, far away. Blaze, their prize stallion is up for sale, but the man buying it only wants him so he can manipulate Dallas Love, she's what he really wants. When he threatens to put him down if she doesn't agree to his terms, she resorts to drastic measures. She is out of options and the only way to save her father's farm, protect her sister and give herself a slim chance of avoiding a fate with the most selfish bastard in their county, is to auction herself off to the highest bidder. Madam Myra takes an immediate liking to Dallas. When she looks at the young virgin, she sees nothing but dollar signs and immediately begins making plans to score Dallas on a much larger scale. She signs Dallas up for a two month contract, but she'll never settle for that. Broderic Lexington own one of the largest cattle ranch franchises in the country and he's happy in every aspect of his life. Except the one most important to him. Romance. He always ends up giving more than he gets back and he's tired of being walked on. He concocts a plan to bring a girl in, a girl who must do everything he says, or else. Who will win the bid for Dallas? Will it be the selfish man who won't leave her or her family alone until he gets what he wants, or will it be the rancher whose motivations aren't much better, but at least he was brought up by a family with principals. Either way, Dallas has the spirit of Blaze and she won't be tamed so easily.
