What can you do when those around you are as messed up as you are? Do you realize that we all have irrational personal quirks – some barely noticeable, others more intrusive? How do you cope in a dysfunctional family, where the search for affection leads to rejection or, at best, indifference? Navin found a way in his own set of obsessive rules of cleanliness. This is a story about life and love amidst psychological issues like obsessions, anorexia, hoarding, and kleptomania.
